

Impacts of migrating to the west

www.Conceptpaper.org

You might become a member of the Student Slave Industry

The student slavery industry in developed countries is very strenuous. Many young people choose to take up a course or degree in developed countries with a view to get a work permit and then permanent residency and then citizenship. The countries offer 20 hours of work rights during student visa. While there are valid students as well, this is basically a student slave industry. Young people come over and work 20 hours on permit and many do extra hours on cash. They do various random tough jobs in the market. They are totally enslaved in the country in the sense that they earn there, and their earning is fully booked already in fees and livelihood expenses. Either that or they avoid tax and work on cash incomes. It is very difficult to cook, eat, study, work, pay fees, pay rent, pay for food, commute and in general maintain a normal life. The whole market has nothing to do with learning and education. It's a visa selling enterprise which is sometimes so tough to maintain that it can be called student slavery. In the end even if you get a work permit it's very tough to get a proper job since they ask for field experience. Some people successfully execute the track since there are valid students too but if you are simply migrating to the west than before migrating on this option, please weigh the efforts involved.

You will have issues going to toilets

The reason this is worth mentioning is that going to the toilet is a very frequent activity for us humans. If it becomes a difficult activity each time then its worth mentioning. The story goes that two people in the west discussed that there's no water in the toilets so what do you do? The second replied that I time my number two such that I always do it at home where there is easy water available. Therefore you might have to carry some shit a while till you reach home and have a watery toilet facility. Its either that or you might carry a toilet water bottle with you each time you go to the toilet. That's an interesting activity as well arranging a toilet bottle for every toilet visit and maintaining a toilet water bottle. Other people use a whole load of tissues and make them absorb water and then use portions of those watered tissues multiple times. In all cases and under all options its worth mentioning that in the west you will have more difficulty going to the toilet every time. If you are considering migrating to the west then since it's a bit of a frequent activity it's worth mentioning.

You will have no house servants

The lack of humans in western countries directly results in a lack of servants to help manage household work like cleaning, cooking, driving, gardening etc. Poverty has been wiped out of developed countries and it is being kept out by keeping underdeveloped countries disturbed and destroyed. Also, there are less humans in western countries due to low reproduction rates. That's the reason you are being brought in. All factors lead to a lack of services in your life. If you think it's a good thing and humans should not clean, cook, drive, garden for other humans than that's a separate topic and we are not discussing that here. In general people who pass IELTS with a good score and who have had great education have also had servants. Many rich parents told their children to focus on education while these children had drivers, cleaners, cooks, gardeners, guards etc etc. These children are not used to doing all household activities themselves and its worth mentioning that you will yourself have to manage this in the west. This ties in with the item 'Your health will deteriorate at a high rate'. This is because you are simply not used to strenuous physical work and you have had a soft comfortable childhood. In the west you need to do much work yourself with no servants and invariably your health could deteriorate because of that. Please sit back and recall whether you or your spouse had servants since childhood. If you or or your spouse had servants then you are in for a physically active experience in the west. This is worth noting when planning to migrate to the west.

Your children will be 110% on you

This is worth mentioning separately. No family, no grandparents, no aunts, no uncles and no servants. It's going to be the parents and their one, two, three or four children. Other items have explained that sleepless nights and childrens burdens sometimes lead to divorces or a choice to have less children. It also could lead to a wrong retirement strategy. In all cases its worth mentioning that you will have 110% responsibility of your children and no break at all from taking care of every need of your children. If you are a father your wife will not be going to her parents home and therefore you will not get a break from your children. If you are a mother you will not go to your parents home where you will have the grandparents and your sisters to pamper your children and disciplining them. So without grandparents homes you will not be going anywhere where your children will be with someone else. Therefore, your children will not be going to any place where you have a break from them. It's also worth mentioning that without a family member or without a long trusted servant you as a parent will also not be able to go out for a dinner or anything. Wherever you go you will have to take your children with you always and always. That loving dinner with your spouse will be difficult to go out to. So before migrating to the west consider this.

Your children will not have family like Aunts, Uncles and Grandparents to train them

Here, here. A separate entry to emphasise this. Other items have explained this and its impacts but something more here. Sit back and imagine from your memory. When you were growing up, try to remember your grandparents and aunts and your time with them. Please try to recall what your aunts and grandparents taught you. Did they ever smile at you ? Your children will not have those smiles and will not have the small lessons taught by immediate family members.

You might have a divorce

This might not be a big problem for many people but it's something worth mentioning. Life is tough in many aspects in developed countries. It requires fit and fantastic couples. If any one of the spouses is unfit and not fantastic then the going gets tough for both and the whole family. Some people choose the option to get rid of their unfit and not so fantastic spouses and continue to more happier options. Its only practical. The reason this happens more often in developed countries is because the stress of children is not shared by grandparents, aunts, uncles and the extended family because they are not present in the same country. Children are your whole responsibility and sometimes the going gets tough if you have 2 or more children. Things get tough and spouses fight. Divorce is so much easy and so practiced in the society that due to the lack of extended family mediations things break down. Therefore, before migrating to the west please keep in mind that you might have a divorce.

You will have less children or very less children

This is also worth mentioning. Sometimes when both parents start earning and doing a job then having a baby is a worrisome activity. Some parents therefore choose to stop and think a lot on the baby project. A father on job, a mother on job, no grandparents, no aunts and uncles, no servants, day cares, sleepless nights, pick and drops and a whole lot of other things lead to a decision to have less children. The child and baby of migrants in developed countries is 110% the parents responsibility. Therefore, it's a tough job to have more than one child. Every child is a burden on both parents and they struggle between jobs and sleepless nights. This also leads to the previous item of 'you might have a divorce' as the strain of more children sometimes leads to difficult times, disagreements, fights and finally divorces. Therefore, before migrating to the west consider know well that you might have less of very less children.

You will probably have very very less grandchildren

Here, here. If you have less or very less children you will have very very less grandchildren. Specially if your children grow up in the west and say I don't want to manage a spouse. Or if they grow up in the west and they say that babies are very stressful and we are only having one. If you are young then sit back and think how many grandchildren your parents have right now. That means your children and your brothers or sisters children. Now in comparison imagine at old age having half or even less grandchildren. Time flies and it's a life choice which migrating to the west could cause.

You might select the wrong retirement strategy

The story goes that two mothers were compared. One had a single child and an almost paid off house due to her and her husband's job. The other mother had 4 children, three boys and a girl and was living on rent with no paid off house in sight. Which mother and parents have a better retirement strategy? Would you prefer children who can take care of you and maybe earn for you at old age OR would you prefer a few paid off houses which can earn for you but not take care of you. This ties into the earlier item of 'you will have less or very less children'. It was mentioned there that because of a father on job, a mother on job, no grandparents, no aunts and uncles, no servants, day cares, sleepless nights, pick and drops and a whole lot of other things lead a decision is made to have less children. Therefore, your retirement option is pension, money and paid off houses and less children. Money, pension and paid off houses can provide money at old age but a decent child who loves you might care for you more. Comparing the two mothers there is a difference in having 4 children around you and one child around you at old age. Four children around you will give you more grandchildren who can make you happy and run around you as well. On the other hand having a few paid off houses is also a wonderful feeling. So would you choose money, paid off houses and less children OR more children? Therefore, before migrating to west please consider that your retirement strategy might get mixed up.

The money you earn will be heavily taxed and you will get a low amount in your pocket

Developed countries are heavily taxed environments. So much so that it's very difficult to 'save' much if you lead a normal life. The definition of a normal life could vary. Some people call both parents working and children in day cares a normal life. Some people call a single income with the father earning and a house-wife stay at home mum a normal life. Whatever is your definition of a normal life please consider that in developed countries there is such an amount of tax that if you spend money, have some holidays and lead a good life you will 'save' a low amount. To save you probably need to ultra save first for a house deposit and then buy a home on interest. Thereafter your house rent becomes your saving. This has some moral and religious problems for some because its interest based. Even if you do embark on this, a number of times the mortgage is higher than a rent so you get to have less money to spend. In any case leading a normal relaxed life means spending some money and unless both husband and wife are fit and fantastic and working hard you will save less. Please consider this before migrating to the west because you are probably an economic migrant.

From the money you do save a big chunk will get spent on visiting your home country

Most probably you are an economic migrant who has migrated due to financial reasons. Please consider that from the money that you do save a big chunk will be spent on your and your family's trip to your home country to meet family. Either that or you and your spouse will not meet family. The result is that your children will not know their family. To estimate multiply the number of children you have with ticket costs and expenses. A chunk of your after-tax income will be spent on this. That is from savings. According to some estimates if your family is a single income family with the mother taking care of children than possibly your entire years savings might get spent on a yearly trip back home. It depends on the number of children you have. The item 'you could have less children' is also involved here. So from the money you do save a big chunk will get spent on a family visit back home.

From the money you do save a chunk will be spent on visits of your parents

Also worth mentioning. From the money that you do save you will be buying tickets for your parents or your spouse's parents. Basically, either you spend money and go to your home country OR you spend money and bring them to your resident country. A chunk of your after-tax income will be spent on this. That's from savings.

Your tax will support killing and disturbances in non european origin nation countries

It's a fact. Part of the reason developed countries are still developed and other regions are under-developed is because other regions have wars caused by developed countries. Yes, you can blame factors within those under-developed countries but read on please. Read this as the 20 year Afghanistan war and read this as the Iraq war. Via the Afghanistan war European origin nations kept Asia dismembered and busy. Via the Iraq war and the resultant ISIS creation the European origin nations caused the middle east very disturbed and busy. Probably something similar in Africa. Are you from Asia, the Middle East or Africa ? Therefore when you migrate to west and work there your work and your tax will support killings and disturbances in non European origin countries. It's a bit funny but basically you are migrating to the place which is the cause of your migration in the first place. You are going to a place which is probably an indirect root cause of you migrating in the first place. In reverse imagine Afghanistan-Uzbekistan-Pakistan-Turkmenistan making a joint army and sitting in the middle of Europe somewhere causing Europe to not have free travel and preventing its development. And then Europeans migrating to these Asian countries. The under developed countries themselves have problems but after the Afghanistan war and Iraq/ISIS affair its very clear that Asia and the Middle East are probably under developed because of the very country you are migrating to.

Your children will be culturally or religiously different from you and your values

This will probably happen to some or all your children. Some people won't care and their values will be the same as those of developed countries. The difference in values is freedom of the self instead of freedom of mind and heart.

More details here:

<https://conceptpaper.org/2021/08/08/new-world-order/>

But if your values are different from those of developed countries then please consider that while growing up in the west your children will take influence from the environment. Therefore, it is highly likely that some or all your children will be culturally or religiously different from you. It also means that the way you want your children to be will be different from what they become due to the environment. This is a highly likely if not definite.

Your children are more likely to have mental health problems

Unfortunately after migrating to the west your children have not had smiling grandparents. Or a smiling aunt which is their mums sister. They will have had tired parents who have had busy lives with probably both parents earning. The children will also have been through multiple languages with one in school and another at home. They will also have seen multiple cultures with one at home, one at the mosque, one in school and one outside. They will also have had selected limited cultural friends. They might also have faced some racism at school due to their colour. In the west they will also be more exposed to sugary chocolates, ice creams and energy drinks. In the west they will also have been exposed to more and more latest gadgets and various social media platforms. They will also probably have had more tv and tablet interaction than human interaction. Please read all of the above again and consider that all of the above cause a strange no family, tough childhood which results in mental health problems at times. This also ties in with your 'children's classfellows will be...' which is the next item. Therefore, before migrating to the west please consider that your children could experience many factors resulting in mental health problems.

Your childrens classfellows will be sons and daughters of divorcees, drunkards, gays, lesbians, gamblers

All of the above are legal, normal and acceptable entities in western society. We are not discussing whether they are good or bad here. But as a matter of fact your children's classfellows will very frequently be children of divorced parents or children of drunkards. Again, we are not discussing why and why not that's a good or bad thing. Its only being mentioned here because your children's classfellows will probably NOT be sons and daughters of gays, lesbians, divorcees, drunkards and gamblers in your normal home country environment. This is a difference to note. It also ties onto the item 'Your children are more likely to have mental health problems'. Due to the multiple societies they face. If you read the factors in both items together you will see that the childhood of your children might be drastically different from your childhood if you migrate to the west.

You will have been trapped in organized human import-export, organized capitalist slavery

Well, let's see now. You were born. You were taken to school for many, many, many years. You studied in a university for multiple years. For probably the first 22 years of your life your parents, family and society spent many, many hours and efforts on you. And then you were plucked from another country and you spend the next 40 years serving in another country. Its like one entity watered the plant for 25 years and when the plant starts giving fruits it is taken by someone else and the fruit is eaten by someone else for the next 40 years. This is organized human import-export, organized capitalist slavery and organized brain drain in the garb of migration to greener pastures. Especially so if you combine this with the item that 'your tax will support killing and disturbances in non-European origin nation countries'. So basically, your tax might end up damaging the country or society which watered you for your first 25 years of life. Before migrating to the west consider that you might be an asset of the society which raised you. And that you might be going to a society which damages and creates wars in the society which raised you in the first place.

The instability in your home country which you left will probably now be funded by you

Please talk to your elders who are 50 years older than you. Ask them the history of your country and the history of your region. Any wars ? Who sold the weapons and what caused the wars ? Any instability in the neighbourhood ? What caused the instability ? You might discover that the 50 years older person will say to you that 'Yes' the European origin developed countries are working against us and are causing problems in our countries, in our region. Read this as the 20 years Afghanistan war which kept Asia back and the recent Iraq war / ISIS creation which caused the Middle East to be totally destabilized. Both being instigated by european origin developed countries. Therefore, before migrating to the west please consider that the instability in your home country and your home region will probably now be funded by you and your tax. If you are ok with this then that's fine but if you feel this might not be right than you might want to live humbly in your own country.

You will have been entrapped in organized large-scale brain drain where engineers, scientists, doctors and educated people are drained out from countries

Again a fact. Part of the reason why under-developed countries stay under-developed is because their top engineers and scientists leave the country. Read this in conjunction with the item that 'the instability in your home country which you left will probably now be funded by you'. It's a double whammy. Also remember that you as a plant were watered for 25 years in your country and you will have been brain drained to another country when the fruits are bearing. And to a country which might be working against your home country. It's organized large-scale brain drain where engineers, scientists, doctors and educated people are drained out from their origin countries to serve corporations in foreign countries. You might want to consider this before migrating to the west. Perhaps sit with a 50 years older person and check out with him the historical facts before becoming part of large-scale brain drain.

Your health will deteriorate at a high rate

A large mix of factors cause this to happen. No servants and resultant physical labour. No family and total burden of children resulting in further physical labour. Tough office work which is high quality required to earn foreign currency. Lack of deep friends in society and office. Constant translation of English to native language. Yearly burden of tickets and flights for the whole family. In general life in developed countries is tough for anyone with children or anyone with more than one child. In general family burden, house management work, office work, grocery, pick and drops, gardening (either self or expensive), etc, etc invariably puts burden on physical health. Add to that the boat load of stress regarding children values management. And the stress of children religious training management. Or add to all this, children taking on values which you don't like. Many factors boil down to the situation where your health and your spouse's health deteriorates at a higher rate in developed countries. Both husband and wife need to be very fit and very fantastic to manage and raise good children and to live a prosperous life. Otherwise, if any spouse is not fit and fantastic then the health of both spouses and the whole family will deteriorate. Do consider this before migrating to the west.

Your children will eat more sugary items and will be more hyperactive than in less developed countries

Money buys chocolates and ice creams a lot. A whole lot more than under-developed countries. Invariably children are eating more sugary items in the west because of the buying power and easy availability. This causes some children to be fat and some children to be more hyperactive. This also ties in with 'your children are more likely to have mental health problems'. You will face this and will have to manage this if you migrate to the west.

Your wife might not cook for you and your husband might not earn for you

It depends. If your wife is working and earning you might need to cook for her instead of her cooking for you. It depends. If you (lady) are a doctor and your husband is not then his earning capacity is lower than you. Thereafter the wife might earn and your husband will manage children at home. It's called house-husband and this is present in the west. All in all many factors lead to a situation which is different from the regular earning-father house-wife mother norm. Its something to think about and it happens regularly in the west. In general if both parents earn then life is very busy and it could affect the health of the whole family including children. If you go down the path of earning-father and house-wife mother then the family will probably have less money. This will then tie down to the item that 'From the money you do save a big chunk will get spent on visiting your home country'. If you go down the path of both parents earning than you might hit the item 'Your health will deteriorate at a high rate' or the item 'You might have a divorce'. Also the item 'you will have less children' and 'very less grandchildren'. All paths could lead to doom if you have children and a family unless both parents are very fit and very fantastic.

Ladies, your foreign country marriage proposal might have been a capitalist entrapment to make you earn money

It was all planned and he married you for your earning capacity in the west. Before the marriage proposal your degree and education were observed and noted. It was checked that your degree, education and experience had a high earning capacity in the west. Then the marriage proposal was sent. It's a capitalist enterprise. Some people won't mind this and it's a bit of a give and take anyway. You also wanted to go to the west yourself so what's the problem. The reverse is regularly practiced. Most if not all families check the earning capacity of the boy before giving their daughter so if the boy is checking the earning capacity of the girl too then what's the problem. This item is only being mentioned because that well sought-after foreign marriage proposal might be an effort to make your daughter earn money. Some people want their daughters to manage a family instead of earning money. It won't be a problem for some. It's a personal choice. Do you want your daughter to be a mother or be an employee and bread earner? It's a choice that's tied to foreign marriage proposals. Something to be considered.

Ladies, as a mother you will have less time for your children

This invariably happens because of multiple factors. It's because you may need to earn additional money to sponsor a family trip to your home country. You might want to meet the family back home. So you need to do a job and so will have less time for children. Or it could happen because you are cleaning, cooking, driving, gardening since there are no servants. It could also happen because you are earning in addition to your husband. It could happen because you are the bread earner while your husband is a house-husband. Its something for ladies to consider and discuss when the family is migrating to the west.

Ladies, you might develop a heavy back ache at an earlier age

Ladies, you might have to clean, cook, drive, garden, do grocery and manage all the affairs of your children 110%. Did you have servants when you were young and did you have servants in your home country? Then you are not used to physical labour. Those servants won't be there and when you do all this work you might develop a back-ache. Or you could earn money and your husband does the work. Then you will have to take the stress of doing a job. And then you will hit the item 'As a mother you will have less time for your children'. Back-aches at young age is not a good thing and it's something worth noting when migrating to the west.

You might sometimes have nowhere to go and no one to meet even on weekends

Migration is an interesting thing, and the resulting loneliness should be known. If you migrate you leave all family, friends and society including that old shopkeeper who knows you since childhood. Therefore, there will be times where you will have nowhere to go and no one to meet. There are attempts regularly made to find some friends and to meet people. The attempts are mainly for children so that children can have someone to play with. It depends how socially acceptable the father and the mother are. If even one of them is an introvert who doesn't want to meet many people then you will need to get used to loneliness. Many people have classfellows from back home, some have Masjid friends, some have colleagues from back home, some have cricket friends. It's an effort to find people to chat with and eventually after some time there are friends whom you can meet. Eventually a social circle is built and you integrate in it. Still there might be times when you will have nowhere to go and no one to meet. This is a factor which should be considered.

You might have less deep friends

It has taken years to develop your bond with your brothers and sisters. Years to develop your bond with your neighbours and your classfellows. Years to develop your bond with your cousins and with your hostel mates. After migration it might take years further to make deep friends in your new location. You will be lucky if already existing deep friends also go to the same country and city. For ladies and gents both friends are very important. In life friends who you talk to and laugh with are an important luxury and an important joy. Please consider that life in the west might be so busy with managing the house, work and children that you will have less time to 'make' deep friends and also less time to meet deep friends.

Your office colleagues will be so multicultural that you might have less office colleague friends

In your home country you could discuss the local politics, the local news, the happenings and a lot of similar issues in your own native language. After migration your office colleagues might be so multicultural that you might have less office colleague friends. Its already difficult to communicate what you have in your heart in a different language. Imagine both ends thinking in two separate languages and speaking in a third language. There will be three languages at play between two people. If both sides are unable to think in English and communicate very easily in English than a language barrier exists always. Work gets done but friendship is difficult to attain. In general, this is not the case in your home country so after migration you might have less office colleague friends.

You will have sacrificed so much for the money you earn that you will have difficulty spending it

This is a very interesting item. After you leave your country and family you first enjoy the new money. Slowly the responsibilities of children and the new life trickle in. Slowly mortgage or desires kick in. Slowly the expensive trips back home kick in. Slowly both spouses start earning to get more money. Slowly both spouses are tired of two jobs, house work and children. Slowly after tax the money seems less and you keep trying to earn more and more. In the end you will have sacrificed so much for the money you earn that you sometimes have difficulty spending it. Basically, in the end you become miserly because the money you have is your only thing since everything else has been sacrificed for it. So you increase it and have difficulty spending it. It's also interesting that fresh migrants have left poorer countries so they spend on things considered important. But their children are growing up in the west and they ask for every luxury in the local town. The migrant parents see those items as very luxurious while the children see it as normal necessary things and ask for them. This causes friction between parents and children as well. In the end migrants work hard and have sacrificed a lot for the money they now have which causes a level of love and greed for this money. Its therefore difficult to spend it.

Your children will be asking for luxuries unimaginable for you but very normal for them

This is because you grew up in an underdeveloped country while they are growing up in a rich developed country. The latest smartphone, an expensive drone, a hover board, an expensive smartwatch. These are normal things for your children but may be unimaginable luxuries for fresh migrant parents. It ties to the item 'You will have sacrificed so much for the money you earn that you will have difficulty spending it'. It causes frustration in children and frustration in parents. This also ties in to 'Your children are more likely to have mental health problems'. You will need to give them the luxury items they want to keep them happy even if they are unimaginable expensive items for you. It also ties to the item 'Your children will not have family like Aunts, Uncles and Grandparents to train them'. This means that their happiness is fully tied to the luxuries they are asking for since there is no family and cousins. It's something to note when migrating to the west as your whole life and your children's brought ups will change.

Some deep office networking,
business deals and information exchange is over Alcohols in bars. To make deep contacts you will need to go to bars and drink

This is very normal for a western developed country. The story goes that one person asked another that if you guys don't drink alcohol then how do you make friends ? Alcohol is said to be a social lubricant. So if you are looking for deeper office networking to enhance your career it might need to take place in bars over drinks. This might be an issue for people who don't want to drink alcohol due to religious reasons. Some business deals and much information exchange is done over alcohol so your career is out of luck if you want these. It should be mentioned that this is not always the case, and you could sit in a bar while other people drink but it's something that's worth mentioning. Possibly back home deep office networking is NOT done in bars and over alcohol. Maybe tea ? Something to consider when migrating to the west.

You childrens classfellows will probably watch porn as an entertainment at a very young age

Electronic devices are more readily available and acceptable in western society. Acceptable because the society is freedom based. This means that from a very young age maybe like 11 or 12 your children's classfellows might have electronic items. You may not allow them because you are a conservative parent but the society has many people who have different values. So, in school and at their friends your children will meet young people who own devices which have access to the internet. Some people might say that porn is watched by youth all over the world. But remember after migrating to the west you are probably now in a place which generates porn. Previously you might have been somewhere which consumes porn at say starting the age of 16 or 17. Now you are at a place which generates porn and starts consuming it at age 11 or 12 because of easy availability of electronic devices. Expect a difference in this when migrating.

You childrens classfellows will probably be having sex at a very young age

Remember that you are in a country which practices freedom of the self instead of freedom of the mind and freedom of the heart. Further details here:

<https://conceptpaper.org/2021/08/08/new-world-order/>

Therefore, there is freedom to do anything you want. This includes a lot of freedoms available to children and youngsters. So while you may want your children to not get involved in some freedom based activities their classfellows will be allowed to take part in them. So, in short, your children's classfellows will probably be involved in things which you deem inappropriate at that age or at any age. It's easy and legal to have an abortion as well. There are no moral or legal consequences. Something to consider when migrating.

Your children might not care much about education because they can easily earn without heavy education so why take the stress of exams and degrees

Education is not directly tied to income in developed countries. Plus, developed countries get imported educated migrants anyway. So the residents and citizens of developed countries don't really need difficult education and big degrees to earn. Simple courses and many simple jobs are available and give a decent income. Therefore, your children might choose to not take a tough education track to a life and choose a simpler path. They are already in the country and are already citizens of a developed country. If you are big on having very educated children this would be something to consider when migrating to the west.

Your children might enrol in a degree and when it's time to take stress and study for exams they might say we don't like this degree and are changing it

Life is very easy in developed countries. It is desires based and happiness based. Children enjoy ice cream, chocolates, holidays, sports. Youngsters enjoy social media apps and night outs. Tough education, assignments, grades and exams are a cause of unhappiness. Specially so if they are not needed much and you can live a life without going through them. So when your child has lead a desires based life based on ice cream and social media apps then when it comes to exams and assignments they might bail out of them. Changing courses and changing degrees running away from hard education. This goes hand in hand with the item 'Your children might not care much about education because they can easily earn without heavy education so why take the stress of exams and degrees'. It also goes hand in hand with the item 'your children might have mental health problems'. If you are big on educated children watch whether your child can do assignments and give exams. Can they sit down and study at all or are they addicted to social media apps and can't concentrate much. This is something to consider when migrating to the west.

You might be disciplining and scolding your children so much that they will be fed up of you when they grow up

This goes hand in hand with a boat load of previous items discussed above. No family and no smiling grandparents and aunts. Both parents earning and tired. Lots of house work and no servants. No one else to help train children. Easy availability of sugary items. In general it could happen that one or both parents discipline their multicultural migrated children so much that the children are fed up of them. Remember that the rest of the society is freedom based and your children will have class fellows which have different values and different entertainments available to them. It all boils down to the children being sometimes totally fed up of their strict and restricting parents. Something to consider when migrating to the west.

Your children might drink alcohol or eat the wrong diet to integrate in society

This is based on the background that you don't drink alcohol and you have dietary preferences like Halal or Vegetarian. So your values are different from the society you are in. After migrating you may carry the same values for the rest of your life but your children might not carry on those values. To integrate in society they might drink alcohol, eat non-halal and eat non-vegetarian. They might want to make friends or make business contacts with people such that they compromise on your (parents) values and go ahead with integrating into society. Something to consider when moving to the west.

Your children might start living with someone without marrying them

It can happen and it has happened. This is connected to the previous items. It's a simple phenomenon that your children might carry the values of the society they are in instead of your values. It ties in with multiple previous items like your children asking for things which you consider expensive luxury items and they consider normal. Or your children being fed up of you as you are strict and society is free. Or your children's classfellows being from a variety of backgrounds with differing value systems. Therefore, this might happen, and it should be considered when migrating.

Your grandchildren might be bastards

Illegitimate children are common in the west. This is carrying on from previous items as well. It's a simple phenomenon that your children might carry the values of the society they are in instead of your values. Therefore they might not marry and live with someone still. Illegitimate children are unheard of in some societies but are common in freedom of the self based societies. Read further here:

Because on a lot of various reasons including a lot of the items previously mentioned your children might carry differing values from you and your background. When migrating you are probably young. You might not even have children let alone grandchildren. But your steps decide your childrens society and if they carry the values of society then it's possible that your grandchildren are bastards. It might not be a problem for some people but it's something worth thinking about in case you prefer not wanting this to happen.

Your daughter might be such that people will not want to marry her because she's modern, not a housewife kind of person and prefers a career over marriage and children

This is also something that can happen because the society is different from your values. While career-oriented women are present in all societies motherhood is part of the deal. Housewives might be considered a bit of an out of fashion thing in young girls of western societies. Something to consider is that many a times if your daughter takes on the values of the society instead of your conservative thought process than she will not be interested in marriage or being a wife or having children. She might just want a career and money instead. She might be a bit modern, western in her dressing as well which is different from the values of your home country. Therefore, people might sense that and might not marry her. Someone with similar values might marry her. Then you will hit the item 'You will probably have no or very very less grandchildren'. It all depends and is something to consider when migrating to the west.

One or more of your children might be religiously or culturally different from your liking

This is also a very common phenomenon. Children take on the freedom based values of western society while your values are based on the society you came from. Therefore, one or more your children might be religiously or culturally different from your liking. Perhaps you have an image in your mind of what you want your child to be like. That image is based on the society you yourself were born in and you came from. But the society your children are being raised in is different. So they are different from what you had in mind for them. Their value system is different. It's something that happens a lot as children take influence from western society. Something to consider when migrating to the west.

You will have less food options to eat outside

Many a times it can happen that migrants come from a place which has halal food or vegetarian food. After migrating to the west please consider that you will be in a society which has different dietary habits. So, you and your children will have less food options to eat outside. Something to consider when migrating in case you enjoy eating outside a lot.

You might have a large language barrier with your own children. Your children will think in English and talk in English and you might think in your native language and translate

This is a very interesting phenomenon. It happens to parents who are not thinking in English and are not smooth in English. Please sit back, relax and think. Are the words in your mind in your native language or English. If one or both parents are not smooth in English and are not thinking in English then they stop and think every time their child talks to them in English. There is constant language barrier between parent and child at home. Sometimes the child says something but the parents take it to mean something else. This can happen to one or both parents. This leads to a wide variety of problems discussed in previous items. The children might have a language barrier with their mother or their father. Something to consider when migrating.

You career might be hampered because you can't think in English and you are translating on many occasions. You are not spontaneous in English and that hampers your career

It can happen that while you passed the IELTS test and got immigration, your English is not very very smooth. Therefore, you might have had a good career in your own native language based country but due to the language barrier your career got hampered in English based country. Certain countries manage English and a native language both. You were able to manage communications when both in English and native language. But in a solely English based environment you could struggle to communicate smoothly. You might need to settle on the job you have in case English hampers your career growth. Or you could put in effort to improve English. Something to consider when migrating to the west.

Part of your life energy might be spent on constantly translating and absorbing English in your home, office and everywhere

This is for those people who don't think in English and are not very very smooth in English. Perhaps you were taught in English and passed the IELTS test but constantly talking in English everywhere is still an effort. You will basically be used to your own native language and have English as a second language instead of it being native to you. Therefore, part of your life energy might be spent on constantly translating and absorbing English in your home, office and everywhere. It can happen to you and your spouse. Part of your or your spouse's energy will be spent on understanding English and talking in English.

One spouse will have more work to do if both spouses are not very very smooth in English

As said earlier both parents need to be fit and fantastic for a smooth sailing in developed countries. Part is this is both spouses being smooth in English. If any one spouse, wife or husband, is not smooth in English than the other one gets the burden of much paperwork and much English based correspondences. This ties to the item 'Your health will deteriorate at a high rate' in case you are the spouse with the better English and with more burden. It also ties to the language barrier between parents and children because children will think in English and talk in English. The spouse with the weaker English, mother or father, will have more language barrier with children. In general all English based communication will be more handled by the spouse which has the better English so that spouse will take a hit. Something to consider when migrating.
